

Nebraska vs. Missouri

Official Program — 15 cents

February 9, 1974

Nebraska and Missouri meet in the Coliseum tonight in a key game for both squads as far as the Huskers' and Tigers' hopes for first-division finishes in the Big 8 race are concerned. Going into today's conference games, the Cornhuskers topped the second division with a 2-4 league mark (one-half game behind 3-4 Colorado), while Mizzou stood in seventh after a four-game losing string dropped the Tigers to 1-4.

"It's imperative for a team to win its home games in the conference if it's going to have a chance at a high finish," Nebraska coach Joe Cipriano says. "We've already lost one home game (73-65 to Kansas State last month), so that makes this one all the more important. Missouri's already lost twice at home, so they're going to have to pick up the slack on the road, making this one very important to them, too."

Seeing coach Norm Stewart's Tigers so low in the standings seems strange after Missouri won its third straight Big Eight Pre-Season Tournament title with an 80-78 finals win over Iowa State only a little over a month ago. Missouri entered Big Eight play with a 9-3 overall record, then defeated the Cyclones in Columbia, 91-83, in the league opener and seemed to be rolling. But since then, Mizzou has lost to Kansas State and Colorado on the road and Kansas and Oklahoma at home to fall out of the conference race.

While the Tigers will be trying to snap that four-game losing skid, they'll be trying to extend their mastery of the Huskers to a record seven games.

The Tigers have won six straight over the Cornhuskers since an 81-72 Nebraska win here in the Coliseum back on Feb. 13, 1971, to equal their longest win string in the series. Missouri also won six straight from Nebraska in the 1931-34 and 1938-40 eras. The overall series stands at 69-61 in favor of the Tigers, but Nebraska has a 28-19 advantage in the Coliseum.

The Cornhuskers come into tonight's game off a heart-stopping, 91-88, triple-overtime win over Iowa State in the Coliseum, Tuesday night. Although the win was the most important thing, a couple of records were set in the Cyclone contest.

Fairbury freshman Bob Siegel hit 12 of 14 field goal attempts for 85.7 per cent to snap Jerry Fort's school frosh record of 80 per cent on eight of 10 against Air Force last year. But Fort didn't lose any ground in the Husker record book. The 6-3 sophomore guard from Chicago took 22 shots from the field to give him a season total of 337 attempts, breaking the NU sophomore mark of 325 set by Tom Baack in 1965-66. "The Stick" can erase Baack's name from another sophomore record tonight if he hits four field goals. Jerry goes into the game with 144 on the season, three short of Baack's record. Fort also passed the 700-point mark in his career with Tuesday night's 22-point performance. With eight games remaining in his sophomore season, Fort has 702 career points and a shot yet this season at becoming only the 13th Husker ever to break 800 career points.
